RICHMOND RIVER HIGH CAMPUS

Task Number	1	Task Name	Source analysis and research task
Course	Year 11 Ancient History	Faculty	HSIE
Teacher	Miss Katie Magriplis	Head Teacher	Mr Jim Selwood
Issue date	Week 4, Term 1 2024	Due date	Friday 4 th April 3:15pm (Week 10, Term 1)
Focus (Topic)	Representation of the Ancient Past and Troy	Task Weighting	40%

Outcomes

A student:

AH11-1: describes the nature of continuity and change in the ancient world

AH11-3: analyses the role of historical features, individuals and groups in shaping the past

AH11-6: analyses and interprets different types of sources for evidence to support an historical account or argument

AH11-7: discusses and evaluates differing interpretations and representations of the past

AH11-10: discusses contemporary methods and issues involved in the investigation of ancient history

Task description

Part 1

Analyse each of the given sources (see attached sheet) regarding Troy and/or The Trojan War. For each source, you should address the following:

- · who created the source
- the nature and purpose of the source
- a brief summary/description of the source
- any issues relating to reliability and usefulness of the source.

Your analysis of each source should be approximately 200-250 words.

Part 2

How do ancient and modern representations of Troy and the Trojan War contrast with the available archaeological and written evidence?

Your response should:

- refer to at least three sources; two sources MUST come from the given sources from Part 1, and at least one other source from your own research.
- contain approximately 750 words.
- include a bibliography (footnotes/in-text referencing is optional bibliography is not included in the word count).

Part 1 – Sources for Troy and the Trojan War

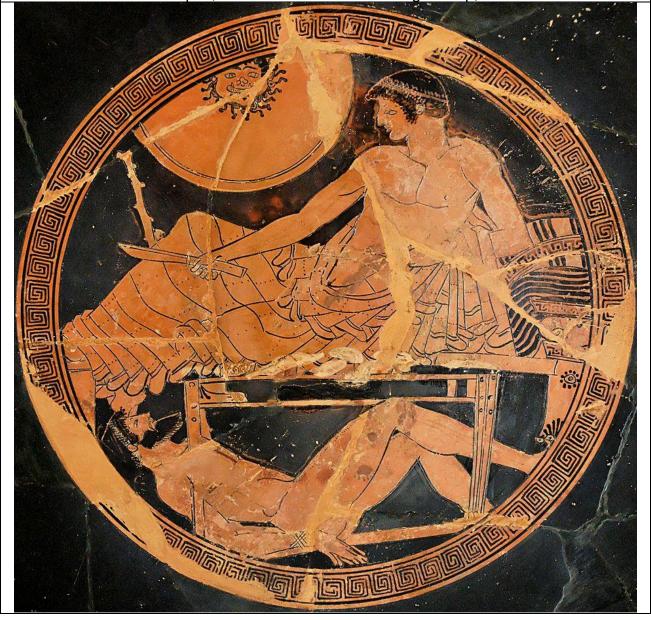

Source 1:

Homer, Iliad, Book 1.1

The Wrath of Achilles is my theme, that fatal wrath [anger] which, in fulfilment of the will of Zeus, brought the Achaeans* so much suffering and sent the gallant souls of many noblemen to Hades, leaving their bodies as carrion [decaying flesh] for the dogs and passing birds. Let us begin, goddess of song, with the angry parting that took place between Agamemnon King of Men and the great Achilles son of Peleus. Which of the gods was it made them quarrel?

The Setting of the Iliad

Homer took for granted that his audience knew a war had been fought for what was alternately called Ilios or Troy. The bard was mainly concerned with describing the wrath of Achilles and its consequences. He used Troy and the war as a poetic setting for a conflict between men and gods. From the archaeologist's point of view, however, the Iliad can be interpreted as a "setting" in an entirely different sense. One may see Homer or his informants as eyewitnesses to Troy and the landscape of Troy at the close of the eighth century B.C., the period when scholars generally agree Homer composed his epic.

Troy was largely a ruined site in Homer's day, but the remains of Troy VI/VIIa, both the citadel and the lower city, were still impressive. Contemporary audiences and later ones from the area around the city were supposed to be able to recognize the general outlines of places where the action happened from descriptive references in the Iliad. They could visualize it, for instance, whenever they climbed up a slope to a sanctuary in "holy Ilios." "Holy Ilios" is the most frequently repeated epithet in the Iliad, and one would expect to see a sacred building in such a place. We can make a convincing case for a sanctuary or sanctuaries, maybe in the form of a wooden building, from the early seventh century B.C. at the latest--roughly contemporary with Homer--on this site, which subsequently served as a cult center into the late Roman Empire. There is nothing in the archaeological record to contradict the assertion that Troy and the surrounding countryside formed the setting for Homer's Iliad in 700 B.C.
